Six Witnesses to See Ceremony -Bride May Fly to Holland.

ers of the Dutch civil service.

It is even rumored that the Governor of Utrecht Province may be one of the witnesses. Immediately after the civil coremony there will be a religious ceremony followed by a sermon in the main hall of Doorn Castle. At this ceremony will officiate the court chaplain from Potsdam, who is expected early next week to be with the ex-Kaiser when he greets his flances on her arrival.

It is understood that Princess Hermine is to travel either in a private train or by airplane and will be accompanied by the adjutant of the ex-Kaiser, who was entrusted with making the formal proposal of marriage last summer and who obtained Princess Hermine's consent after a delay of three weeks during which the members of the imperial family constantly brought arguments and social pressure to bear on her in an effort to make her decline the offer.

services for the late Kaiserin. Sunday was the Kaiserin's birthday anniversary, but the imperial flags did not fly from Doorn Castle as they did last year. The ex-Kaiser, however, refused to meet visitors and spent the morning with the chaplain and the afternoon conferring with the court marshal and his advisers. Fridry, however, both the ex-Kaiser and the ex-Crown Prince telegraphed to the monarchist group in Berlin to see to it that the ex-Kaiserin's tomb was appropriately decorated.

Berkley, English Violinist, Plays Here Once More

Gives Enjoyable Recital on Same Date as Last Year's Event.

By W. J. HENDERSON.

Harold Berkley, violinist, gave a re like that of his previous recital, showed that he had a sincere regard for the best music written for his instrument.

Those who go to many violin recitals could perhaps have dispensed with the sempiternal "Devi's Thrill" of the venerable Tartini, though it must always be a pleasure to those who do not liston to it too often to hear it played as smoothly and unaffectedly as Mr. Berkley played it last evening.

The second number on his list was Mozart's D major concerto, also a familiar composition, but one which can never fail to awaken admiration for the master who wrote it it serves again to remind us that Mozart had an exceptionally good training in the technic of the violin at the hands of his father, Leopold Mozart, a fine violinist and the author of an excellent treatise on the art of playing the instrument. A good performance of a Mozart concerto is much like the good delivery of a Mozart opera air, a demonstration of sound art and good taste.

Mr. Berkley is a well schooled violinist whose tone is light, transparent and engaging and whose intonation is rarely at fault. His command of double stopping is excellent and he has a bow both firm and elestic. He plays in a clean, honest, straightforward manner, with appreciation of the style of the works before him.

In addition to the numbers mentioned his program contained Szymanowski's "Notturno o Tarentella" and some is program contained Szymanowski's "Notturno o Tarentella" and some shorter pieces, including "Waves at Play," by Edwin Grasse, the blind violinist. As usual at such recitals there was a large audience, which liberally applauded the player.

Orchestra's Aims Clarke Reception

Friends and Supporters of City Symphony Outline Ideals of Society.

To explain by personal touch the puroses of the new civic movement in the City Symphony Orchestra under the City of New York there was a reception Lewis L. Clarke, 998 Fifth avenue. Two hundred guests listened to explanatory talks by Gen. Coleman du Pont, presint of the society; Dr. John H. Finley, Mr. Clarke, Dirk Foch, conductor of the new orchestra, which will give nearly fifty concerts at nominal rates, and by Frof. Alexander Lambert.

Mrs. Clarke, Mrs. Coleman du Pont and Mrs. Heary P. Loomis were hostesses in behalf of the projectors, who aim to extend cultural effects of classical music to those who have few opportunities to hear symphonic programs. Between speeches there was delightful music by a trio from the new orchestra—harp, flute and cello—with vocal selections by Miss Leta May, coloratura soprano, and Knight MacGregor, barysoprano, and Knight MacGregor, bary-tone. Miss May sang in place of Miss May Peterson, who was prevented by a tone. Miss May sang in place of Miss May Peterson, who was prevented by a cold from appearing.

Gen, du Pont said: "It is our hope that this orchestra will take the best of music to a great many persons who cannot be reached in any other way. The war taught us the way of reaching the public through good music."

Dr. Finley spoke of the orchestra and the organization back of it as "a complement and not a competition" and added: "The society intends to extend the gospel of the right use of leisure time. The civic worth of the orchestra will lie in its opportunity to bring musical culture to a great many persons usually left out of the reckoning. This organization is going to find out what best can be done with the idic margin of the day and thus do creative work. It will bring music to the dumb places."

Mr. Clarke, in introducing Mr. Foch read a letter from one of their mutual acquaintances, who wrote: "My friendship for Mr. Foch has been based upon the recognition of his absolute devotion to music. No one stands so ready to sacrifice in its cause." Mr. Foch said he and his orchestra would start their work November 18 in Carnegle Hall and that they would strive to carry out the lofty ideals of the projectors of the movement.

Prof. Lambert said that never in his nasociation with music in New York had he known a movement to create so
